Outlook in New York Seemed to Affect Stocks.

THE LONDON MARKET STEADY

Bank Statement Showed an Increase in Actual Cash of Over $8,000,-000-Loans Expanded.

Special Dispatch to The Star. NEW YORK, October 13 .- For no welldefined reasons there was a sudden access of uneasiness evident in Wall street today with regard to the outcome of the elec tions, and consequently the stock market declined steadily during the larger par of the brief business session. Apart from the course of the political campaign there was little or nothing in the news over night bearing upon the general market or individual securities, nor indeed was there any change in the odds laid against the democratic candidate in the betting.

Such concern as was expressed with regard to the political situation was attributable chiefly to Washington dispatches setting forth that the administration was worried as to the outcome, although it was recognized that such an expression of opinion was doubtless for the purpose of dispelling the apathy on the part of the adversaries of the democratic ticket. The London stock market was steady des pite further heavy withdrawals of gold from the Bank of England for shipment to Egypt, but little was done here for foreign account. It was commonly assumed, in view of the large gains in cash which the banks have made this week, and on account of the great discrepancy in the cash item which was shown in last Sat-urday's bank statement, that this week's return would make a strong exhibit, but this prospect cut little figure in the specu-

Mainly because of the uneasiness regard-ing the political outlook, Consolidated Gas sold off sharply from its opening figures, and the local traction shares were heavy. also. Declines were common, however, in all quarters of the market, with rather noteworthy pressure upon the copper

The bank statement showed an increase in actual cash of $8,431,000, a sum which was considerably in excess of the preliminary estimate. The change shown in this item undoubtedly represented in part the correction of the discrepancy in last week's figures. The loan account showed the unexpected expansion of $13,326,600 and the increase in that item, together with the gain in cash, was inadequately reflected in the deposit account, which rose only $19,437. Surplus reserves increased $3,601, 000, and the banks now hold $13,024,000 in excess of the lawful requirements. Surplus reserves in the corresponding week of last year were $10,211,000; in 1904, $15,957,000, year were $10,211,000; in 1904, $15,957000,

Social Life in Italy. From the St. James' Gazette.

No matter how poor a fashionable Italian family may be, no outward sign of their lack of means will ever be observable. They may live in the meanest of apartments, poorly furnished and inadequately heated; they may even go without proper food, but they will always appear in ex-pensive clothing, the head of the house will frequent the most fashionable cafes, and when milady shows herself in the park in the afternoon it is in her own carriage with two smartly liverled servants on the box.

If a woman of position cannot afford a carriage she will remain at home. The Italian's object in owning a carriage is not so much the convenience of getting in the park at a fashionable hour. The Italian cares little for the comfort or beauty of his home. A large part of his life is passed out of his house, on the streets, at the cafe, the club, or the theater, and hence he has slight inclination to spend either time or money in making his home comfortable or pleasant.

SUCCESS WITH LILIES.

Few Simple Rules Secures Variety of Beautiful Blossoms.

In spite of the beauty of lilles and the ease with which they may be grown, few of them are seen in private gardens. This lack may be remedied by following a few simple rules. There is a vast variety of lilies and among them may be found those suitable for almost any kind of soll. The first requisite for successful lily culture is good drainage, not only on the surface of the bed, but at its bottom as well. This may be obtained by raising the bed several inches above the surrounding level and placing broken crockery, pots or stones In the bottom, spading the bed two feet deep The best soil is a loam enriched with thoroughly rotted manure. If the soil is heavy a liberal quantity of sand, mixed well will insure better drainage and prevent decay. A little sand directly beneath each bulb insures against decay. The beds should be kept free from weeds and cultivated occasionally in dry weather, Moisture may also be saved in dry, hot weather by mulching the beds with straw or old manure. The build should be planted five to eight inches deep. This depth of earth will better enable the plants to withstand drouth and cold. A covering of leaves, straw or manure should be used to protect the bulbs from the alternate freezing and thawing be removed when the shoots appear in the spring. As the amateur gardener pro-ceeds with lily gardening from year to year he will learn needs of each variety, but in general the foregoing instructions will suf-

PEDIC AILMENTS

HOME TREATMENT FOR ANNOY. ING MALADIES.

How to Rest the Feet and the Proper Shoes to Wear. 1.1 Written for The Star. Women who walk or stand a great deal have trouble with their feet almost invariably. Not only does the entire foot swell, the soles become tender, burn and sting, but often the arches of the feet break down, causing excruciating agony, and in some cases crippling the sufferer for life Proper treatment at the right time will save even a breaking arch, and there are nany things that can be done to alleviate the lesser foot trouble. Many women look to the night to provide this, and when they have laid their aching feet on a bed, con sider that they have done the best that is possible for them. In reality their feet are getting only half the blood that might be theirs. Instead of being laid flat, on a level with the rest of the body, they should be raised on a pillow or two, so that the blood flows away from them. This relieves congestion and cools them.

from habit, stand to perform. They simply do not think to seat themselves when comblinen and the like. Especially when the feet are painful is it necessary to keep them raised in a footstool or chair, for feet touching the floor never more than half

Bathing the feet is essential to their comfort, and it is wise to toughen the skin as well as to cleanse it. For the last purpose there is nothing more hardening to the cutiele than alum. This may be put into the warm foot bath at night with little soda bicarbonate—ordinary cooking soda—or after soaking in well-warmed wasoda—or after soaking in well-warmed water the feet can be rubbed in a saturated solution of 50 per cent alcohol and powdered alum. The soda in the night bath is used for its cooling effect. If the alum and alcohol lotion is put on, the latter should be rubbed in on rising as well as on retiring. Every morning, if able to stand the shock, let cold water run on the feet before applying the lotion. Faithful feet before applying the lotion. Faithful treatment of this kind does much to re-lieve a woman's sufferings from foot torture and often takes away all her discom-

Shoes and Stockings Must Fit.

Further than this, stockings and shoes should be of the right sort. A fresh pair of stockings each morning is not to be considered a luxury, but a necessity. Let them be of cotton, not too thin. Questioned recently as to the most comfortable and most durable stocking for everyday wear, the buyer of a large department store declared light-weight, but not thin, cotton hose to be the most sanitary and most sensible. Sllk 87% and lisle were too harsh for the feet, he said.

How to Treat Corns.

Corns, even soft ones, are apt to become painful at times. The simplest treatment that can be applied to ease them is to stick over each a piece of adhesive plaster. This keeps the shoe from pressing directly upon the corn, and if the latter is but slightly sore will often make the foot entirely at be softened with iodine, if painted daily.

Pure carbolic acid will eat away a corn, but must be used with the greatest care.

Merely touch the hard part with cotton wet Be very careful not to touch the lesh about the corn or the soft part of that When moistening the cotton use a firmly good-sized wad, and wet only the tip of one end with the carbolic. If too much is absorbed by the wad, it will wet the fingers and burn them. Because carbolic in small quantities—a couple of ounces in a bottle is sufficient—and always to accompany it when in use and to stand beside it on the shelf should be a bottle of alcohol, containing at least a pint of fluid. Alcohol counteracts the effect of carbolic, if used immediately. So, if by chance the flesh about the corn should become moistened with the latter, pour on alcohol or there will be a more painful foot than at the beginning.

The hard calloused spots that form on the bottoms of the feet often get into a very tender condition. If they thicken coniderably, as is usually the case, a part surface with a piece of adhesive plaster and place over this a thick layer of cotton. Topping this is another piece of adhesive. This has a circular piece cut out of it that is just the size of the calloused spot. This arrangement makes a healthful pad for the sore area, which is well protected, but not too thickly covered, the last adhesive be-

While broken arches are most common to the shop girl, the agent, the dancer, the waitress, the nurse and those engaged in equally active occupations, there are housewives also who are crippled in this way. One but just released from one of the largest hospitals in the city had been confined to her chair for two years by this injury. Business women who travel about town a great deal and swing themselves off trolley cars which are still in motion sometimes break down their feet.

Special Aids for Broken Arches.

Whoever suffers in this way must visit an orthopaedic surgeon at once and have the feet strapped and bandaged in proper position. The first symptom of the trouble s pain in the arch or simply in the heel of the foot. Resting the feet, keeping them off the floor, if it can be persisted in, will right matters without any other atention in this preliminary stage of the breakdown. Just at this time a strap of adhesive plaster will be found restful to the feet. Make the strap two and a half or three inches broad, lay it under the foot beneath the arch, bring the two ends up, crossing them at the front of the ankle. and let them run up the sides of the legs for about ten inches. What will prevent this trouble entirely, according to an orthopaedic surgeon of reputation, is constant toeing in. Some there are who support weak arches by a steel one. The latter is leather covered on the upper cide. ter is leather covered on the upper side, so that it does not hurt the foot. These steel arches are adjustable to any pair of shoes, slipping easily in and out.

Coats for Small Girls. For smaller girls, say ten, there is an exceedingly good coat model on empire lines. The original is made from white broadcloth, the short waist defined by a broad stitched band, and four handsome buttons form the double-breasted closing of the short body. A double cape falls over the back, but is rounded off to the neck soon after leaving the shoulder seam. The sleeves are full, pleated at the wrists, and end in double turn back flaring cuffs. The only trimming, beyond the exquisite stitchonly trimming, beyond the exquisite stitching is a handsome collar of golden brown beaver, and the whole was decidedly a marked example of elegant simplicity. The hat destined to go with the coat was a fine French felt, trimmed with soft louisine and white plumes. This cost $35 and was in mushroom shape, a style that promises to be worn very much this fall. It is a shape, too, that is generally becoming to the be worn very much this fall. It is a shape, too, that is generally becoming to the plump, round little faces of childhood. Even bables are wearing this shape, and speaking of bables reminds me of an exquisite long slip that may be copied by a mother with skillful fingers who desires daintiness before all other qualities. It was fashloned from finest linen lawn, with a very small round yoke embroidered in a tiny design of forget-me-nots. To this was added with veining a slightly full skirt, trimmed on the bettom with a narrow ruffle edged with real valencienne lace an inch wide. Above this a running vine of the embroidery appeared and the little puff sleeves were confined with narrow embroidered cuffs. Narrow frills of real lace finished the neck and sleeves, and the price of this exquisite little sleeves, and the price of this exquisite little slip was exactly $90.

If women would wear goggles instead of chiffon veils when motoring there would be fewer cases of strained optic nerves and of iritis; at least this is the opinion of a well-known oculist, who declares that since automobiling has become such a fad the number of "iritis" patients has increased 90 per cent, and the persons suffering with overstrained nerves of sight were never so numerous before, "Never ride on a front seat without goggles." he says, "and my advice is never to get into a touring car without a pair of glasses that will protect the eyeballs from both wind and dirt. Wearing veils—a style that is gradually dying out—is better than having no protection for the eyes, but if worn continually - particularly the heavy chiffon-the nerves of sight are strained by constantly looking, trying to discern objects through them. The necessity of peering through a sieve-like material in an ef-fort to get a clear view of any distant object brings on an unconscious strain that is njurious, and if women would only realize the harm they are doing their optic nerves in wearing "auto" vells fewer of them would be used.

"In discarding vells there are two altertives the goe give a grotesque appearance to the face, and going with the eyes unprotected.
"Without a shield over the eyes I believ that motoring is not only harmful, but really injurious, for the dust that collects on the eyeballs when touring at a high rate of speed on country as well as city roads brings on inflammation, granulated lids, pinkeye, acute catarrhal conjunctivitis, iritis and several other similar troubles. these inflammation is the least troublesome, for it is simply an enlargement of the blood vessels in the eye and may be easily cured by frequent washings with a 5 per cent solution of boric acid, provided no more auto trips are taken until the congested condition is cured.

"While granulation usually comes from a diseased condition of the eyelids, there is a form of it brought on by getting dust into the eyeballs and the constant rubbing to remove the irritating specks. In an effort of the remove the irritating specks. fort to get a gritty piece of dirt from the eye the lids are pulled up and down and rubbed in every conceivable way until they begin to get sore and red. Then, if not treated properly granulation begins. Some-times it can be cured in a few days, but more often once started it lasts for severa

"Getting dirt in the eye or foreign bodies on the cornea, as we call it professionally, is also injurious, for if these hard specks are not removed they cause an inflamma-tion that not infrequently results in an ulcer of the cornea that if not carefully treated by an experienced oculist may entirely destroy the eye."

Shade Trees in Cities. From the Philadelphia Ledger.

This is the season when the dwellers in cities appreciate the benefaction of trees. In Philadelphia there are many miles of practically treeless streets. In the newly built up thoroughfares there is every convenience in the appointments of the smartlooking dwellings. The street is smoothly paved. As a city dwelling place the neighborhood seems perfect, save in one essential thing, the presence of trees. The almost universal use of awnings is a silent but eloquent protest against treeless streets. Occasionally some forehanded and prescient builder provokes a block of houses with shade, little oases in the general aridity of the great city. Such garden spots lure tenants, and remain as a memorial of the hu-manity of the projector and of his desire to do something worth while for the city beau shade, a reminder that trees will grow if suitable provision be made for them and a little care be bestowed upon them, even in the desert of brick and mortar. Trees should be found in Philadelphia, where the people live and pursue their tasks, as well as in the parks and the compar beautypear. people live and pursue their tasks, as well as in the parks and the coming boulevards, which are visited at intervals. The theory that a city may become too dense for the successful culture of shade trees may be true of certain centers of traffic, but many large towns have something approaching the leafy lane in the residential streets. We hear much about the forestation or reforestation of the countryside. The good offices of societies for the promotion of tree planting in cities are needed in every large planting in cities are needed in every large municipality. The general forestation of such a spreading city as Philadeiphia may not be feasible, but it should be possible to make provision for shade trees on some methodical plan in streets to be opened in the future. It is encouraging to note that a few real estate operators in the suburbs have been been trees on their heldings. a few real estate operators in the suburbs have begun to grow trees on their holdings before erecting dwellings. This is an example which should be followed. On the other hand, in preparing new areas for building, some moble forest limits have been or will be despoiled. The destruction of a fine forest within the city limits is a public calamity, a vandalism which cannot be excused under any pretext. Mr. Beecher sen tenced the tree destroyer to outlawry in this fashion:

"Remorseless men there are crawling upon the face of the earth, smitten blind and inwardly dead, whose only thought of a tree of ages is that it is food for the ax and saw. These are the wretches of whom the Scripture speaks, 'A man was famous as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees.'"

Manners at Home.

If parents have one set of manners for the home and another for the outside world, the children will copy those they see in daily use.

There must be no selfishness at home, if one does not want the boy or girl to grow up selfish. The foundation of the best manners is a good heart, of course; and a kindly feeling toward every one. With-out this they are but artificial, and will not stand the test of the buffeting of the world and all its opposing forces.
